Holi 🌈 A Carnival of Colors and Love

Across India the festival of Holi celebrates good harvest, fertility and heralds the arrival of spring. The day also commemorates the mythical and immortal love of the most revered Hindu deities - Krishna and Radha. In Hindu mythology, Radha's rapturous love for Krishna and their relationship is often interpreted as the quest for union with the divine. The legend describes the extreme delight Krishna took in smearing color on Radha and her cowherd friends - the 'gopis'. Krishna's prank later became a trend and a part of Holi festivities. Today people celebrate by flinging scented colored powder and water and coloring each other in the color of love.

As a festival, Holi has a secular spirit with people from all castes and classes coming together and celebrating in a riot of colors and high spirits.

In wishing you a Happy Holi, Software Folks hopes the spirit of the new season will nourish, sustain and bring love in your life. We also hope you will discover new reasons to celebrate and new customs to call your own.

Have a very Happy Holi
